INFORMATION RELEASE

HEAVY RAINS IN CHATHAM COUNTY
15 JUNE 2004 – 11:35 AM

For today's date the tide is expected to be LOW at 1:18 PM the tide will be HIGH at 7:29 PM.

The latest local forecast from the National Weather Service calls for rain to continue, heavy at times through mid day but will taper off this afternoon and into this evening. Chatham County may experience showers off and on through the night but the bulk of the rain on the ground should drain off before tonight's expected high tide.

CEMA has been in contact with local emergency dispatchers who are receiving numerous calls concerning traffic accidents. Motorists are advised to use extreme caution when traveling on wet roads, especially where there is standing water and to allow extra time to reach their destination.
